Inter-generational relationships crucial to Indian communities

Continued from page 2

Hopi story continued from page 2

A small opportunity to talk from their hearts
American Indian Elders: A Neglected National Treasure

Executive Summary

Traditional values and roles of elders need...
Despite own needs, elders seek ways to help youth

The focus on older adults’ needs and priorities is also important for younger generations, who have their own unique challenges and opportunities. By providing a framework for understanding the needs and preferences of both groups, policymakers and program designers can create more effective interventions and services. This can help ensure that the needs of all community members are met, fostering a more inclusive and equitable society.

Executive Summary

Not only does this paper provide a valuable resource for policymakers and program designers, it also highlights the importance of engaging older adults in decision-making processes. By incorporating their input and perspectives, policymakers can create more effective interventions and services that meet the needs of all community members.

Contents

Traditional values and roles of elders need to be incorporated into program designs

An opportunity to listen

Intergenerational Relationships crucial

Executive Summary

Mexico-Indonesian Research & Policy Institute

Executive Summary

Mexico-Indonesian Research & Policy Institute

Executive Summary

Mexico-Indonesian Research & Policy Institute